

OMNITECH

Film series

Technology and media seem to surround and encompass us these days; usually, but not always, by our choice and with our willing participation.

This series will focus on movies and television programs that depict our modern, plugged-in reality and show our complex, ambivalent relation to the machine which becomes more like us every day. Or is it the other way around?

Each screening will be followed by a panel discussion with faculty and students.

Refreshments will be served.
